15 MAJORITY.

The Contesting Board Decide in Favor of Judge Anderson.

The contested election case of Judge W. P. Winfree, Dem. against Judge A. H. Anderson, Rep. was tried to a conclusion Saturday. The board before which it was tried was composed of County Clerk John W. Breathitt and Esquires Peter F. Rogers and N. H. G. Brasher. The case was heard in detail and occupied about ten days. On the face of the returns Anderson had 3,065 votes and Winfree 3,065. A great many depositions were read on both sides and the proceedings were very tedious and devoid of excitement. The decision of the Board was that Anderson received 33 illegal votes and Winfree 23, leaving Anderson 15 ahead. The corrected vote therefore stands 3,057 to 3,042. Judge Winfree is not discouraged by this decision, but will appeal to the Circuit Court, where he expects to have better success. His attorneys are confident that Winfree was elected by from 10 to 20 votes, while if Judge Anderson is required to prove the legality of "unknown" voters on his side, Winfree will be counted in by from 50 to 75 votes. The case will come up again in January.

Sudden Death of Mrs. Bush.

Mrs. Jennie Gary Bush, wife of Mr. Chas. H. Bush, of the Hopkinsville bar, died very suddenly Sunday night. She attended church in the morning and was in usually good health until some time after dinner, when she was taken suddenly sick. A physician was speedily summoned, but found her almost pulseless and in a hopeless condition. She continued to grow worse until 10 o'clock p. m., when she ceased to breathe. Deceased was a daughter of Mr. R. S. Gary, of this county, and was about 28 or 29 years of age. She was married to Mr. Bush several years ago and leaves three little children, the youngest about a year old. She was a consistent member of the Baptist church and her funeral was preached at the church yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, by Rev. J. N. Prestridge. A large concourse of sorrowing friends followed the remains to their resting place in the City Cemetery.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Sallie Malone, wife of Dr. G. Malone, on the night of the 7th inst., after a painful and lingering illness. She was a consistent member of the Baptist church. She leaves behind a husband and five small children besides an aged father and other relatives to mourn her loss. Remember bereaved ones, she has only gone before, she forms one more link in the chain that draws you to land where we know no suffering nor sorrow.

HERE AND THERE.

Dr. R. R. Bourne will be absent from his office until the 25th inst.

Mr. Willis G. Perry was baptized at the Baptist church Sunday night. Store room at No. 18, Ninth street, under this office, for rent 1887. Apply here.

The Council held a called meeting last night to consider the proposition to divide the city into wards.

The property of the Casky Creamery Co., will be sold to the highest bidder at Casky Friday Nov. 19th.

Mr. Tom Williams will have a sale of personal property at the Gray place east of the city next Saturday.

FOR SALE—A house and lot on South Main St. House has 5 rooms, cabin, good stable, etc., on the place. Apply at this office.

The dedication of the new church at Fairview was postponed from the second to the third Sunday. It will come off next Sunday.

Messrs. Vaughan & Kennedy will offer for sale, 18 head of fat cattle, at T. C. Williams' sale on Russellville road next Saturday the 20th inst.

We have a 6 drawer New Remington sewing machine for sale. If you are needing a machine we can make it to your interest to call at our office.

Guy Reeves and Eliza Gant, were the names of a colored couple who were married by Rev. James Allensworth, in the clerk's office, yesterday morning.

"They say" several more weddings will come off before the 15th of December. One has already been announced for the 24th at the Baptist church.

Thirty-one colored people were baptized in Sinking Fork, near Smoot's Bridge, Sunday. All were converts of the protracted meeting now being held at the Bellevue Colored church.

Six white couples have taken out licenses to wed this month, to-wit: Wm. H. Candler to M. J. Adams. Sid. Drickel McGowan to Mary E. Hanbury. Sidney Johnson to Cora Gracia. Jno. H. Green to Emma H. Campbell. A. M. Henry to Mary E. Stowe. Jno. H. Orton to Rosa J. Boley.

Capt. A. R. Perkins' little girl, aged about six months, died of flux Sunday night. This makes the third child he has lost this fall, in addition to the loss by death of his wife. He himself and his two remaining children are now quite sick with the same disease.

Mr. Rutherford, a young man about twenty years of age and a son of Mr. C. R. Rutherford, of Trenton, died at his home in that place last Monday morning from pneumonia fever. He was buried on Tuesday evening at the family burying ground—Elkton Progress.

Rev. J. M. Mitchell, who was pastor of the Colored Methodist church here during the last conference year, has been transferred to Tennessee and Rev. C. H. Palmer has superseded him. The new pastor was recently stationed at Millersburg, Ky.

Some parties mischievously inclined amused themselves Sunday night by taking gates off and turning stock into front yards. Boys, you ought to be ashamed of yourselves to so far forget yourselves as to engage in such business. It is wrong. Don't do it any more.

The following supervisors of taxes have been appointed for Christian county, viz.: R. T. McDaniel, R. Y. Pendleton, H. Clay McCord, Thomas H. Elliott and Jas. J. Smith. They will meet the first Monday in January and remain in session three or four days. The pay is $2 per day and the fine for non-attendance is $20.

Judge Thos. C. Dabney, one of the most prominent lawyers of Cadiz and one of the best-known and most highly respected citizens of Trigg county, died of pneumonia at his home in Cadiz last Friday. He was about 64 or 65 years of age and had filled a number of important official positions in his county and district.

Dr. H. M. Sherman, the noted Specialist arrived in Owensboro Wednesday evening; his room at the Daniel House was crowded Thursday with the afflicted from early morning until late in the evening. The Doctor will return to Hopkinsville Dec. 12th, at the Burbridge House; those who did not have an opportunity to consult him on his last visit here, should do so on his return.

Mr. T. E. Herndon, has removed his Broom Manufacturing outfit from Hopkinsville and located in Clarksville. His place of business fronts on the public square next door to the Clarksville National Bank. Mr. Herndon is a native of Logan county, Ky.—Clarksville Chronicle.

This is a mistake. Mr. Herndon sold out his interest in the factory here to his partner, Mr. Wood, who will run the business as heretofore. Mr. Herndon will engage in the same line of business in Clarksville.

The South Christian Hunting Club left last Tuesday for the wilds of Arkansas on a fortnight's hunt. They will hunt on White river, near Duval's bluff, this season. The members in attendance this year are Sam R. White, captain; P. J. Glass, J. R. Caudle, George M. Hart, Lyman Combs and Henry H. Bryant, of Christian county; P. T. Burke, New York; Edward Drane, Nashville; Austin Peay, Dr. H. T. Drane, J. S. Parrish and W. F. Buckner, of this county. They take with them servants, dogs, horses, wagons, provisions, snake medicine and everything else needful to their convenience and comfort. This club always finds game and will doubtless have fine sport on this trip.—Clarksville Tobacco Leaf.

MARRIED.

BOURNE—PENDERGAST: Dr. Robt. R. Bourne of this city, and Miss Alberta Pendergast, of Nashville, will be married at that place to-morrow at 2 P. M. They will depart at once on a bridal tour to Washington City, by the East Tennessee and Virginia route. They will return home about the 25th inst., and take rooms at Mr. H. C. Gant's on South Main street. Dr. Bourne is one of the leading dentists of Hopkinsville and during the seven or eight years he has resided here has made many warm friends, by his uniform courtesy and gentlemanly bearing towards all. He is a gentleman of high character and enjoys the respect and confidence of all who know him. His bride was formerly a teacher in the schools of this city and is a young lady of the highest intelligence and culture. We heartily congratulate our bachelor friend upon his good fortune in securing a wife possessing so many endearing traits of mind and heart. May they always be happy as they journey hand in hand towards that bourne from whence no traveler ever returns.

Mr. Harry Clark and Miss Emma Wilson, of the Bellevue neighborhood, eloped to Clarksville Sunday evening. They were accompanied by Mr. J. J. Reed and a young lady friend of the bride. The party returned in burgies yesterday and passed through the city en route home.

Married, at the residence of the bride's father on the evening of the 10th inst., by Rev. A. W. Meacham. Mr. Ritchie R. Tuggle to Miss Virginia Hancock, daughter of Mr. David Hancock, of the Montgomery neighborhood.

Not Exactly an Elopement.

Newstead and vicinity was considerably stirred up last Saturday over the sudden marriage of Mr. Arthur M. Henry to Miss Mary E. Stowe, youngest daughter of Mr. W. T. Stowe. The young people have been for some time in that delectable state of felicity that usually precedes matrimony, but there was more or less parental objection and despairing of being able to obtain the consent of the young lady's parents they decided to marry anyhow. The prospective bride was of legal age and so on Friday evening Mr. Henry came to the city and secured that document which has been instrumental in uniting so many loving hearts—a marriage license. He took some friends into his confidence and at 2 o'clock Saturday morning a hack called for the bride's residence and in an hour she had been conveyed to the residence of Mr. R. H. McGaughey, where the groom resides, and Rev. J. C. Tate had united the young couple in the bonds of matrimony. The first intimation her parents had that their daughter was getting married was when they discovered that their daughter's room was vacant in the morning.

Mr. Henry is a very worthy and highly esteemed young gentleman, a nephew of Mr. McGaughey, with whom he resides, and connected with some of the best families of the county. His bride is a winsome and exceedingly attractive young lady who has reigned as a belle in West Christian since her school life ended a few years ago. Her father is one of the wealthiest and most respected citizens of the county. The principal objection to the marriage it seems was based upon the mother's unwillingness to have her only single daughter leave her, and not from any real objection to the prospective son-in-law.

CROFTON, KY.

Nov. 14th, 1886.

ED. SOUTH KENTUCKIAN:

We have had three hot contests this year, but the last surpassed anything we have ever witnessed and much of our majority is due to the work of our ladies who furnished a fine dinner and good music while the girls whispered glibly in the boys ears "vote for prohibition."

J. J. Nixon has sold all of his property here to D. J. and W. B. Crabtree for the consideration of $2,400, and he contemplates going to Idaho.

G. R. Hancock has sold his residence and shop to Dr. J. W. Pool who has moved to our town.

Wm. Sizemore and Asbury Long caught a coon (four legged) that weighed 29 pounds net and without the head, the veracity of these gentlemen is beyond questioning notwithstanding your readers will think this is a very cozy item.

Born, to the wife of Julian Boxley Nov. 14th, a ten pound boy.

Dr. McCord, of Consolation neighborhood, has been confined to his bed several weeks of dysentery and his recovery is thought to be doubtful.

W. E. Damon and family will move to Bowling Green, Ky., in a few days. They have only lived here but a short time and their friends are many. We regret losing so valuable a citizen, but duty calls him elsewhere.

Yesterday was the first Saturday we can call to memory for the past five years that there was no one on our streets intoxicated.

Robt. Utly and Mrs. Lizzie Cheaney of this place were married Friday at Madisonville, Ky., after which they took the train for Clayville, Webster, Co., Ky., where they will make their home.

The I. O. G. T. met Saturday night at Academy Hall with fifty members present.

The army of the United States consists now of 2,102 officers and 23,946 men.

SCATES' MILL DISTRICT.

MACDONIA, KY., Nov. 10, '86.

Our farmers are about done sowing wheat in this section. Wheat is looking very well.

Corn gathering and tobacco stripping are in order at this writing.

Mr. Dan Cranor is teaching a very interesting school at this place. Mr. Cranor is a live, energetic young man and our directors would do well to procure his services in the future.

Eld. T. H. Moore, of Madisonville, is conducting a meeting at this place this week. He arrived here Saturday night, but was taken seriously ill immediately after his arrival and did not commence preaching until last night. He will probably remain here the remainder of the week.

Mr. Philip Batson died at his home near this place on the 5th inst. He had been a sufferer from dysentery for several days and was thought to be convalescent until Monday night when he began to grow worse and gradually sank until the angel of death relieved him of his sufferings Thursday. His little babe followed Sunday. They were interred at the new burying ground near the Christian church.

One residence, one business house and one tobacco barn have been erected in our village this season and White & Murphy are now building a large and substantial barn for receiving and prizing tobacco.

Mr. F. M. Carner talks of moving his blacksmith shop hither and an undertaker's establishment and masonic hall are being agitated. The county demands that all branches of trade be represented here, railroad or no railroad.

If it is profitable to sell whisky in our district or if the traffic has been kept up at all your Crofton correspondent is entitled to credit for making the discovery. The little paragraph in my last did not imply that all the citizens of Scates' precinct were temperate. I stated and do repeat that the majority of the ladies present at Mr. Henry's speaking signified their opposition to the movement and that their husbands, sons, sweethearts, etc., were temperate, and to those (those ladies), the horrors of intemperance as pictured by the friends of prohibition were as "fairly fiction." No man was more disgusted at the drunkards at the August election than was the writer. But where did they come from? Some of them were imported here and voted for certain prohibitionists who also imported the whisky, and what a grand time such men will have now. When men cannot buy their drinks with money "Buck" has no idea who his neighbors will sell his vote for a drink since there is no penalty for importing and giving it away. As to Charlie Trotter's death this was indeed a very melancholy affair. Charlie was a dear good boy and left a great many warm friends of whom the writer was one, to mourn his untimely death. This however was but the out-growth of an old gambling feud, with which poor Charlie had nothing to do. But enough, the election is over, the movement is now a law, the issue is between the loyal and the lawless, and let us all do hope that those who worked so faithfully for this movement will be equally faithful in effecting a rigid enforcement of the law. But in conclusion I wish to say that the report that those drunken men forced the officers of the last August election to abandon the polls is false. The contest was very close between two candidates for J. P., and each received a heavy vote to the last, which together with the inefficiency of the clerk who finally gave the job up to one of the judges, kept the polls open till very late in order to poll the vote, when, for want of light, the officers were forced to abandon the polls without posting and signing them.

With kindest feelings toward your Crofton correspondent and all others who worked for the movement with an eye single to general good, I am as ever the same unwavering,

ROUGH AND READY.

Messrs. Thos. C. Hanbury and Jack Hanbury have gone into the tobacco warehouse business at Nelson & Jessup's old stand under the firm name of Hanbury & Son. The senior member is a gentleman well-known and of wide popularity in this and adjacent counties. He has had much experience in the tobacco business and will command a fair share of the trade of this market. His son is a young man of good and industrious habits, who will do much to assist his father in building up a good patronage for the new firm.

"JUDGE NOT."

How the Conscientious Christian Exercises a Self-Restraint for the General Good and Thus Feels the Weight of the World Upon Him.

Many restraints are imposed on himself by the carefully conscientious Christian. Our Lord pointed to one of them when He said: "Judge not that ye be not judged." It is a warning that we will get back as good as we send if we furnish the laws of criticism too vigorously, but it is much more. A profound philosophy underlies all our Master's injunctions, and in this case a practically simple rule rests on the deepest foundations. A world in which men never restrain their judgments—made up of men who render quick verdicts on all the items in the observed conduct of each other—is a morally impossible world. The victims will retaliate, and a scene of disorder will issue from the war of words which will be as much as a war of retaliation which we read into a doctrine of self-defense. One hurls the stone of condemnation, the man who is hit will be full of stones, and of course will become impossible. How far a man surrenders to society what belongs to him, in order that society may protect the rest of his rights and possessions, may be discussed forever without a settlement.

The philosophers of the "social compact" have undertaken an impossible task, for no man can find any basis for giving a part (that one may keep the rest) which differs from the compromise he might make with a high-way robber. To this robber he might say: "Take my watch and let me keep my clothes." To society he might say: "Take my money and leave me my liberty" or "Take my property as much as you like and leave me the rest," but there is no ethical basis for such a compromise. Our Lord reveals a solid moral foundation for self-imposed sacrifice as self-restraint and privilege; and this basis is the simple necessity of self-restraint as a condition of well-being.

If we judge harshly we shall be harshly judged. A society conducted on the principle of unbridled judgment and speech would be intolerable. Freedom in such a world would have no value. Liberty begins to be precious only when we restrain ourselves of it. Parting with it in self-restraint, we keep all of it as valuable in the pocket of our reasonable and practical claims to freedom; but the simple rule reflects a higher truth out of its eloquent face, for the restrained judgment would not be righteously restrained by the Master's rule if it were not necessarily an unrighteous judgment; and it is unrighteous for at least three reasons: 1. It is not, and can not be, certainly true and sound. As self-restraint is imperfect intellect it must be liable to defects. 2. It can not be certainly and entirely free from the bias of wrong feeling. Few men of fine conscientiousness will trust themselves in all judgments upon all men. In some cases the feelings of the best man will warp his verdicts to injustice. 3. In a great multitude of cases we have no right to a judgment. The man is another man's servant, and it is not our business to judge him; and in matters, and we blaspheme when we decide it in advance of the day of judgment. These defects of judgment and misapprehensions and impudences of judgment reveal a highest reason for self-restraint. We do not know, we may possibly be prejudiced; it is the Lord's business. To pass any and every hasty judgment—and to do it as an exercise of liberty—would be to convert liberty into a cloak for unrighteousness, and there can not be any right to such liberty.

In substance, then, the surrendered rights never existed. No man yields up to society any thing which belongs to him. It was never his right to condemn without evidence, and to gratify his passion by a vindictive judgment. All the judgments from which he is restrained may fall under one or the other head, if indeed, some of them are not attempts to exercise the office of the judge of the world, but is the motive, that ye be not judged, a high one? Yes; but high and low are terms relative to one's moral nature. The man who sees no dignity, elevation, moral sublimity, in a rule which, so to say, puts the world at his feet, and who is probably incapable of high and holy self-judgment and self-restraint. For our part, we confess that there is an inspiring power in the thought that Jesus appeals to the sensitive moral part of his soul, and that he is self-restrained, and teaches the individual man that the order and peace of the world depend on his self-restraint. It burdens each man with the weight of the world. Each becomes responsible for the din and clash of a world of warring judgments.

Is not this the very simplicity of the teaching of Christ—the very difficulty with which stumbles the sinful world? He surely goes into the individual soul to accomplish the redemption of the world. He saves men only as He saves a man; and this man He saves after the man has come to a sense of personal need of salvation. Always must God be with man, and understood as dealing with the best interests and deepest needs of individual souls. He appeals to self that He may abolish the selfish life. He saves the self that the saved self may live unto Him who died for him, and that he may not really a low motive which lifts a man to self-surrender in the very interest of self-preservation. The fact that it lifts, that the man rises by it, is the sufficient proof that the motive is high. It is in truth no mean motive, but the highest in our human horizon, which prompts us to obey the law of that self-restraint which imposes silence on our clamorous judgments against our fellow-men.—N. W. Christian Advocate.

The Bible is a precious storehouse, and the Magna Charta of a Christian. There are records of his Heavenly Father's love, and of his dying Saviour's legacies. There he sees a map of His travels through the wilderness, and a landscape, too, of Canaan. And when he climbs on Pisgah's tops, and views the promised land, his heart begins to burn, delighted with the blessed prospect, and amazed at the rich and free salvation. But a mere professor, though a decent one, looks on the Bible as a dull book, and peruses it with such indifference as you would read the title-deeds belonging to another man's estate.—Berne.

—One of the most important distinctions of our judgments is that some of them are intuitive, others grounded on argument.—T. Reid.
